Madurai,

My dear Sam,

I am thankful to you for your kind letter. I am really very sorry that I could not reply to your earlier letter as I had gone to Agra. I am glad to share an account of my visit to that place. The Taj has been erected on a white marble platform. The platform has, on each corner of it, a high minaret. It seems these minarets are standing guard to this monument of joy and beauty. The building has a white dome, beautiful pinnacles, and lovely arches. The walls are so designed with colorful patterns that even many centuries after it was built there is nothing to match it. I visited the Taj on the night of the full moon. The white moonlight spread all over the building and I was lost in my thoughts after seeing its charm and beauty. The Taj has a beautiful setting. There are shady trees all around. There is a channel of very clear water which is flanked by marble pavements on its both sides. There are springs and tanks in the gardens. In fact, the Taj is a superb monument of masonry of the Mughal times. There was a sizable rush of visitors on that night. I saw many beggars also spreading their hands for alms in the names of the great Moghul King, Shahjahan, and his consort, Mumtaz Mahal, in whose memory the Taj was built. I hope you would also spare time to pay a visit to this beautiful monument.

With best wishes.
